A TIRESOME CONTEST. The Base Ball Comedy Presented by the

Chicago and All-America Teams.

It was perhaps a good thing that the President went down the river vesterday, and was thus unable to attend the game between the All-America and Chicago round-the-world teams. He told them that he liked to see a good game, but he would have been sadly disappointed had he witnessed the game of yesterday. As it was, about 2,500 people, who had made the pilgrimage to Capitol Park with the expectation of seeing some good ball playing. were treated to as poor an exhibition as is usually presented by professional players. The score was 18 to 6, in favor of the Chicago team. The game was won in the first inning, the Chicago men piling up 8 runs before they were retired. Crane and Earle, and Baldwin and Anson were the batteries. The people were generally hopeful that Healy would pitch, in order to see the kind of man the Statesmen are going to have in the box this year. Ward evifavor as possible and put Crane in the box, making an evident mistake, for he pitched a lazy, inefficient game, and was very ineffective.

Baldwin eight. Chicago batted hard and often, and their hits were well aided by the miserable the part of both teams. Anson's men seemed to hit the ball simply because it was easy to do and they liked to see it sail to the sky. They ran bases because the air was cold and the wind keen, and some kind of exercise was plant. It is not easy to recall a more thoroughly satisfactory Mephisto than that of Vetta. He filled with power every scene in which he figured, and his clear, flexible, and splendidly dramatic voice forced the audience out of its reserve. necessary to keep warm. Ryan and Burns were terrors at the bat, each making four hits, Ryan with a total of six bases and Burns five. Earle captivated the hearts of the crowd and produced about the only enthusiasm by his work. He played ball every minute and hit the ball for three bags twice in succession. WARD'S RECEPTION. Ward was treated very fairly by the crowd.

and the spectators, believing that he was fair game, welcomed each of his three errors with derision. Before the audience. This evening "Maritana" derision. Before the game was over Ward was the laughing stock of the audience. He not only made three misplays, but threw so badly twice that errors were credited to Carroll, who played first, and on two occasions displayed bad judgment in his work as a captain. The second basemen, Manning and Pfeffer, both did beautifully, their playing standing with Earle's in marked contrast to the rest of the exhibition.

A brass band did what it could to enliven the occasion. Chicago made 17 hits and 5 errors and All-America 7 hits and 7 errors.

John Ward says he considers Whitney one of the best pitchers in the league, and one reason why he (Ward) did not go to Washington was because Whitney was released.-Exange. AMUSEMENTS.

ALBAUGH'S OPERA HOUSE. -The New American Opera company gave a rather uneven ren-dering of "Faust" last night before an audience which possibly might have been more responsive and less inclined to be coldly critical if they had paid a higher admission fee. The attempt to give grand opera at reasonable prices seems somehow to excite the prejudice of a large section of theater-goers, who invariably watch efforts of the kind with an ill-concealed hostility that makes the statement of the section of tility that makes the work of the artists doubly difficult. On the principle of the "boy about town" who lives very high immediately after pay day and starves for the rest of the month, these people eagerly pay fabulous prices to hear one great singer, aided by a corps of pretentious mediocrities; but for a company containing several really good artists, with the inevitable others who are not as good they refuse to ble others who are not so good, they refuse to make any allowances at all. Washington audiences have in the past frequently paid fancy prices for much less meritorious performances of "Faust" than that of last night. Of course, it it was easy to pick flaws in the work of the chorus and of some of the principals. So it always was with the big troupes Mapleson lently wanted to show the people here as little | used to give us. On the other hand there was much of great merit in last night's performance. Miss Natali's Marguerile was conscientiously if somewhat heavily acted. She has a Both pitchers were very wild, sending man true and pleasant voice of good range, and she after man to bases on balls, Crane seven and used it with honesty and effectiveness without attempting any of those vocal pyrotechnics with which only artists of the very first class are ever really successful. It is not easy to reaudience out of its reserve. Particularly moving was the scene with Marguerite at the opening of the third act. The part of Siebel was almost equally well taken by Miss Lizzie Macnichol, whose many friends were delighted to hear again the rich. resonant tones of her fine contralto. She played the part with a modest reserve that was artistic and delightful. Alonzo Stoddard's Valentine was admirable in every way. His voice last night seemed clearer and stronger than ever before, and the death scene was in-He was greeted with applause when he came to tensely dramatic. Mr. Castle's Faust was less the bat, and he started out under good auspices. But his work was very poor in the field, pected. His appearance aroused many pleaswill be sung.

NATIONAL THEATER.—That very interesting play, "Jim the Penman," was well acted at the National theater last night by a company which includes among its members Joseph Whiting, W. J. Ferguson, Clarence Handyside, Harry Eytinge, and May Brookyn. HARRIS' BIJOU THEATER.—De Mille and Barard's realistic railroad drama, "The Main Line." was given by a good company to the manifest delight of a large audience at Harris' last night. Much of the scenery and mechanical effects used in the production is very in-genious and the action is full of interesting and amusing incidents. People fond of sensational plays will find "The Main Line" well worth a visit. Mr. Hubert Sackett gave a manly and intelligent impersonation of the artist. Miss Laura Dinsmore, as a telegraph operator, won the immediate regard of the audience by her bright ways and pretty face and figure.

Kernan's Theater.—The Boston Ideal 'Uncle Tom's Cabin" Company gave the old drama with some new features and "business" at Kernan's last night. The audience was large and seemed to find a great deal to interest and amuse them in the familiar story. THE BISCHOFF CONCERTS.—The closing pair of these entertainments will be given at Congregational church this and to-morow evenings. Dr. Bischoff will give an organ recital each evening. A WOMAN SERIOUSLY HURT.

Said to Have Been Assaulted by a

A mysterious case of alleged assault is being investigated by the police of the South Washington police station. A white woman, named Cora Monroe, about forty years old is the victim. Her home is at No. 327 Maryland avenue southwest. She was found about 9 o'clock Saturday night with a severe cut across her head, weak from loss of blood. She was re-moved to Providence hospital, where she is now under treatment. It was stated on the street Saturday night that the woman had been struck with a stone by a colored man, but the man was not arrested. RICHARD CARROLL HER ASSAILANT.

The police have learned that the woman was assaulted by Richard Carroll, the negro who was nearly killed Saturday night by being struck on the head with a stone thrown by Harper Green, as published in yesterday's STAR. This is why Green assaulted Carroll, so the police say. As Carroll was unconscious when taken to the hospital, the police were unable to learn anything from him of the assault.

This morning the sisters at Providence hes-pital reported that the woman was still very ill. Carroll, who is at Freedman's hospital, is improving, and the physicians think he will

Easter Cards-J.JAY GOULD, 421 9th. ap13-7t* An Approved Paliative in Hooping Cough. This dreaded epidemic affection be-ginning as a slight catarrh and progressively terminating in the most violent paroxysmal cough, which in term causes bleeding from nose and mouth. The dread of mothers, a tortue to the little innocent ones, who is not familiar with its symptoms? Science has no remedy, but nature has provided us with a paliative, the Soden Mineral Pastilles, which dissolved in warm milk and given at regular intervals, will in a short time relieve this trying disease, which, if not checked in time, frequently causes bronchitis, pneumonia, or even consumption. A careful, loving mother needs only the assurance that these pastilles have been acknowledged by rea-son of scientific investigation, and recommended as a superior remedy in these affecand such Bargains have never been offered before.
